Entrepreneurship news at ALCS

Middle school students can compete in Entrepreneurship challenge at UPB: The Entrepreneurship Program and SIFE team at the University of Pittsburgh at Bradford has invited teams of four-eight students from area schools in grades 6-8 to compete to present a plan for a new product or service targeting youths their age which promotes wellness—healthy eating, physical fitness, living well.

A panel of judges from the University of Pittsburgh at Bradford will select the top 10 business ideas and invite those middle school teams to the university on Wednesday, February 28, during Entrepreneurship Week USA. The selected teams will work with Pitt-Bradford SIFE students to formalize their business plans to be presented to the panel of judges.
